

Did Jewel Have Plastic Surgery On Her Nose

The term used in plastic surgery for procedures carried out on the nose is called Rhinoplasty. Plastic surgeons can re-shape most parts of the body, not just the nose but the tummy, bottom and breasts. There are three areas which seem to be becoming more popular over recent years and they are eyelids, liposuction and procedures to adjust the shape of the nose.

Rhinoplasty (the political correct version of a nose job), nose reduction or nose reshaping is done by removing the skin and completely changing the structure of the nose, including bone and cartilage. There are a few different methods used for nose reshaping. One method involves substituting the nose by removing skin from the back of the arm and suturing it into place and a new nose can be created. Nose re-shaping or Rhinoplasty is also considered to be re-constructive surgery, where there is serious damage, and not just an aesthetic procedure.

The top five procedures asked by men in 2005 were nose reshaping, transplant of hair, eyelid surgery, liposuction and breast reduction. Whether your nose was broken and left crooked, or you just aren't happy with the way your nose is, you can safely and now realistically alter the way that it looks. Men are quickly catching up with the number and range of cosmetic procedures available to them.

Cosmetic Nose Surgery should be performed by a surgeon only with very talented aesthetic abilities and preferably a board certified plastic and reconstructive surgeon. In addition, the Rhinoplasty procedure should be performed with minimal surgical trauma to the nose, with no external incisions and match and blend all facial features to look very natural and un-operated. While the previous points are important, it is also necessary to remember that the patient should not feel much pain or discomfort and that the operation was carried out to the highest standards of safety.

It's not just adults that are having re-constructive surgery either as increasing numbers of teenagers have cosmetic work carried out to improve their looks by having a nose job or breast enlargement. Work on the nose might include, making it longer, shorter, straightening it or even removing any lumps.

Sometimes to alter how your nose and jaw looks all you have to do is re-shape your chin. People who have small or receding chins will understand this because this facial condition will automatically make the nose look larger, a situation which could be made worse if they already have a larger nose. That is why many nose operations are also followed by reconstructive surgery to the chin, in order to balance the features of the face.

Despite this, it is always worth remembering that facial re-construction, whether a small nose job or a full face lift, might not necessarily make you a more beautiful person or make people change the way they treat you. Some patients request this surgery because they perceive their nose to be either too big or an unattractive shape. In other cases where there is a medical reason like a broken nose for example, the cartilage may be causing breathing difficulties. Nose re-shaping can bring medical benefits for those that need it and a bonus of a more symmetrical face.
