

Basics Of Front Yard Landscaping

Many people tend to focus their landscaping efforts on the front yard, since the front yard is generally the first thing people see. There are a variety of different styles of landscaping for the front yard. As well, there are countless numbers of ideas for landscaping that remain in the minds of many homeowners. Below are some basic landscaping concepts for landscaping your front yard.

Building Materials

The most common material for front yards is bricks. They can be used in many ways to add height, create paths, borders or edges. In addition, they can be used to provide a patio area for relaxation. Bricks are inexpensive and can be used without the need for professional help.

In some situations, concrete may be more suitable. Although it is generally less desirable than bricks, it is often better for people who are in wheelchairs or serve drink or food on a trolley. Although concrete may need repair every couple of years, it is very useful in making patios.

Front Yard Landscaping For Desert Climates

Desert climates can often limit the landscape of a front yard. However, if a practical approach is taken, appropriate plants can be used that will thrive in dry and arid conditions. Drought resistance plants like Longwood Blue Bluebeard, Oleander and Purple Sage are ideal for planting in your front yard.

Driveways

Landscaping driveways is central to front yard landscaping since driveways lead the people to inside the house. One can think of numerous landscaping styles for the driveway. Generally, it is better to plant firm trees along the sides rather than small plants, especially if playing children use the driveway. Also, if the budget allows, it is recommended to gate the driveway. Gating makes the driveway more secure and beautiful. Building a small wall to protect people and animals from treading the lawn is also an important part of front yard landscaping.

Footpaths Shrubs And Solar Lights

The footpath leading from the driveway to your front door should ideally be made from bricks or stones. By planting flowers and lush plants along one side it will look more pleasant. Try to use medium rocks rather than large ones. The more popular stones used for this purpose are pumice, limestone and granite.

Shrubs can dramatically increase the beauty of front yard landscaping. They give a soft and fresh look to any place, while also defining the yard's boundaries. As well, they help to provide a great deal of privacy. Solar lights help to add a decorative touch as well as sufficient lighting during the evening hours. As well as being very decorative, they are also very cost effective.

About the Author

Visit Emma Richardson's website for handy tips and landscaping ideas

Source: <http://www.article-idea.com>